It is time well spent: a journey via the well-rehearsed Bletchley Park story to the role played by various 'pinches' (captures) of Enigma materials from sinking German vessels or commando raids. During 1942 the Germans added a fourth rotor to naval Enigma machines, which temporarily blinded the Bletchley decoders.

For Canadians -- its all about the Dieppe catastrophe. In a little over six hours, 4132 out of 6000 men became casualties assaulting a small German occupied French seaport just across the English Channel. By tea- time, the Dieppe Raid became the greatest Canadian catastrophe in World War II -- and all for what?

The 1942 Dieppe Raid - The Second World War - History ...
The Dieppe Raid was an Allied assault on the German-occupied port of Dieppe, France on 19 August 1942, during the Second World War. The main assault lasted less than six hours until strong German defences and mounting Allied losses forced its commanders to call a retreat. Over 6,000 infantrymen, predominantly Canadian, were supported by The Calgary Regiment of the 1st Canadian Tank Brigade and a strong force of Royal Navy and smaller Royal Air Force landing contingents.

The Dieppe Raid: The History and Legacy of the Allies' Failed Operation to Land on the French Coast during World War II was both an insightful and deeply irritating read. The author did a good job of telling the story of the Dieppe Raid, but the mission was not well-thought-out, and it seems that almost everything that could go wrong did go wrong.
